

romantic encounters occurred in her SUV (including one in the parking lot of the S.C. Policy Council) and in her State House office.

7. Rep. Haley and I also went out in public together on several occasions. While we usually met at Bar None in Five Points, we occasionally met at The Back Porch restaurant on Gervais Street across from the Clarion Town House hotel. We generally associated with my friend Kenny Boggs, a computer programmer, and Lewis Gossett, who is president of the S.C. Manufacturers' Alliance. Mr. Boggs was aware of my relationship with Rep. Haley, while Mr. Gossett was not.
8. My physical relationship with Rep. Haley ended in June of 2007 when I began dating the former Katrina Marie Steinborn, who is now my wife. Rep. Haley specifically requested that I notify her in the event this relationship was getting serious so that she could "back off."
9. However, shortly after I informed Rep. Haley that my relationship with Katrina was "getting serious," Rep. Haley presented me with the allegation that my future wife had been unfaithful to her previous husband in her first marriage. This allegation was made in the context of a request I had made of Rep. Haley to assist me in getting an order of protection for my future wife against her ex-husband.
10. Rep. Haley eventually "backed off." As phone records confirm, we remained in contact. During one of our late night phone calls, Rep. Haley informed me that she wanted to confide in Eleanor Kitzman, who was serving as the Director for the South Carolina Department of Insurance, about our affair because she was hurt and had no one to talk to about it.

11. In addition to our phone calls, Rep. Haley and I exchanged numerous emails and text messages after the affair ended. I deliberately deleted these messages at the time because I had failed to honestly answer my wife's questions about my relationship with Rep. Haley.
12. Early in 2009, however, one of my late-night text message exchanges with Rep. Haley was intercepted by my wife while I was in the shower. My wife took the liberty of responding to Rep. Haley with the following text message:
13. "This is Katrina. Keep it business only."
14. The most recent text message exchange between myself and Rep. Haley that referenced our prior relationship took place on January 3, 2010 between 12:22 A.M. and 1:05 A.M. while I was in Birmingham, Alabama away from my family.
15. It is my opinion that if Rep. Haley would allow a forensic examination of the State provided laptop and/or desktop that she used between the dates of early 2007 and 2009 that it will contains emails confirming what is set forth herein.
